ANDREA SWAN

PRINCIPAL, SWAN ARCHITECTURE

Order. Balance. Iconography. Whimsy. These are the most intriguing aspects of architecture and design for Andrea Peschel Swan, president of Swan Architecture.

With women composing only 20 percent of the architectural industry, being a woman-owned architectural firm sets Swan Architecture apart. But what really sets Swan apart is her unique vision and experience with “all things architecture.”

Having had extensive training in Italian architecture, including a year in Rome, Swan doesn’t just do classical. But for those clients seeking authenticity in their homes, her training and knowledge make her stand out.

“My ideal project is one in which quality is the guiding factor, not time or cost, because when we properly plan a project based on quality, we are ensured a smooth process with guaranteed results involving little unknowns,” Swan says. “I believe that being professional can include having fun, and for those clients interested in enjoying the process, I make this a priority.”

Swan is most inspired by the pure joy clients feel when they first sense that their visions are becoming reality. “I enjoy many things, but what I enjoy most is the personal connection and the trust gained with my clients.”
